Dear Sir,

Considering the past record of Microsoft Corporation in failing to obey agreements concerning their abuse of their monopoly position we feel that the proposed final judgement is woefully inadequate.

Microsoft has clearly abused their monopoly position in several areas and has never shown any sign of changing their behaviour. The proposed final judgement suggests a body checking Microsofts behaviour with two out of the three appointments to that body being suggested by Microsoft, and no actual power.

This is only one of the many problems with the proposed final judgement, but it is bad enough.

Yours,

Adam and Christie Morris, Milwaukie, Oregon.
